Why should you learn brush pen calligraphy?

Another fantastic lure about brush pen calligraphy is that you don't need expensive equipment to pursue your love of hand lettering. All you need to learn brush pen lettering are two essential tools - brush pens and paper - and the appetite for practice.

How to choose a calligraphy pens & brushes?

Calligraphy pens and brushes come in various styles and sizes, each suited for different techniques. A good starting point is to consider the type of nib or brush tip, the ink flow, and how comfortable the tool feels in your hand. These factors greatly influence your experience as you begin to learn the fundamentals of this elegant art.

How should I store a calligraphy pen?

To store a calligraphy pen, make sure your nib is dry before putting the pen back in a mug or container. I keep all my pens in a mug with nibs inserted and ready to go. This is a low-maintenance situation for calligraphy pen storage.

What is the difference between brush pen and pointed pen calligraphy?

The core difference between brush pen calligraphy and pointed pen calligraphy is the tools used. Brush lettering is created with a brush pen (or sometimes a paintbrush) with a brush-shaped tip. In contrast, classic calligraphy involves a special dip pen (with a pointed nib) and a continuous flow of fresh ink.

What is the difference between brush lettering and calligraphy?

Brush lettering is created with a brush pen (or sometimes a paintbrush) with a brush-shaped tip. In contrast, classic calligraphy involves a special dip pen (with a pointed nib) and a continuous flow of fresh ink. The same method of using alternating 'pressure' applies to both styles.

Are nib pens good for calligraphy?

Nib styles may not satisfy advanced calligraphy techniques. Might not be suitable if you prefer traditional dip pens. Soft tips can wear down with heavy use. I found the Craft 'n' Beyond Calligraphy Brush Pens to be quite user-friendly, making them ideal for beginners.
